Inflation

Inflation is the rate at which the general price level of goods and services rises over time, reducing the purchasing power of a currency. It is typically measured using indexes like the Consumer Price Index, which tracks the cost of a representative basket of goods. Moderate inflation is considered normal in a growing economy, but high or unpredictable inflation can erode savings and make long-term planning difficult.